

What raw power we witness when we live where the land meets the sea. We understand when we see storm waves crashing on the shore; we have no control over these natural forces. Waves have a rhythmic quality about them, yet, from time to time, they do whatever they want.

Sharon Warman Agnor