For New Admin Assistant, Working for the City was "Meant to Be"

Emily Bare wasn't the first in her family to work for the City of Cannon Beach.

Before being hired as the Community Development Department's Administrative Assistant, Bare's high school-aged son Tyler interned as a seasonal Parking Information Aide with the Cannon Beach Police Department.

"Tyler fell in love with the job," Bare says. "He fell in love with the officers, City Hall, all of it. On rainy days he'd come in and help out however he could."

When Tyler began with the city, Bare was working as a pharmacy technician in Warrenton. Bare's multi-generational household—including her parents—relocated to Astoria from Bend in 2021. Bare was happy with the pharmacy job, but then opportunity struck.

"My dad left the newspaper open one night and my position {with the City of Cannon Beach} was advertised in the newspaper," Bare says. "My dad was like, 'Emily that sounds right up your alley.'" She mentioned the job to Tyler and he was ecstatic.

The only catch? Applications closed the following day.

So Bare and her father stayed up late, revising her resume. She drove to Cannon Beach the next morning but City Hall was closed. Fortunately, she knew folks in the Police Department, who emailed her an application which she promptly submitted. Bare was brought aboard in November.

"There is no such thing as coincidence," Bare says of finding the job the night before applications were due—at a place her son cherished, no less. "It was meant to be."

While working in land use is new to Bare, record keeping and administration are quite familiar. Prior to moving to Oregon, Bare worked and retired from a career in corrections, helping open the High Desert State Prison in Susanville, California.

"I kind of did it all at the prison," Bare says. "I started as a correctional officer and by the time I retired I was the hospital administrator."

Now immersed in community development, short term rental permitting, building codes and more, Bare enjoys exploring the subjects of her new profession. "It's nice to learn new uses not related to crime and felony, and time spent," she says.

In her free time, Bare enjoys quilting, spending time with family, and gardening.

"I love being in the yard," Bare says. "I'm having to make friends with the deer that eat all my flowers--but at least they're smaller than the elk in Cannon Beach."

On her lunch breaks, whenever possible, Bare walks the beach.

While she's delighted with her new position in Cannon Beach, Bare is perhaps happiest what the job with the city represents to her son.

"It meant more to Tyler that I'm here than anything," Bare says. "We've move so many times over the years. Once I got the job he finally felt settled."

Harvesting Prohibited at Haystack Rock

A message from City Manager Bruce St Denis

This is an open letter to whomever is going into the marine preserves at night (Haystack Rock, etc.) and stealing the live mussels for your dinner or party guests.

Folks around here have made and are still making a concerted effort to improve the conditions of our local marine environment.

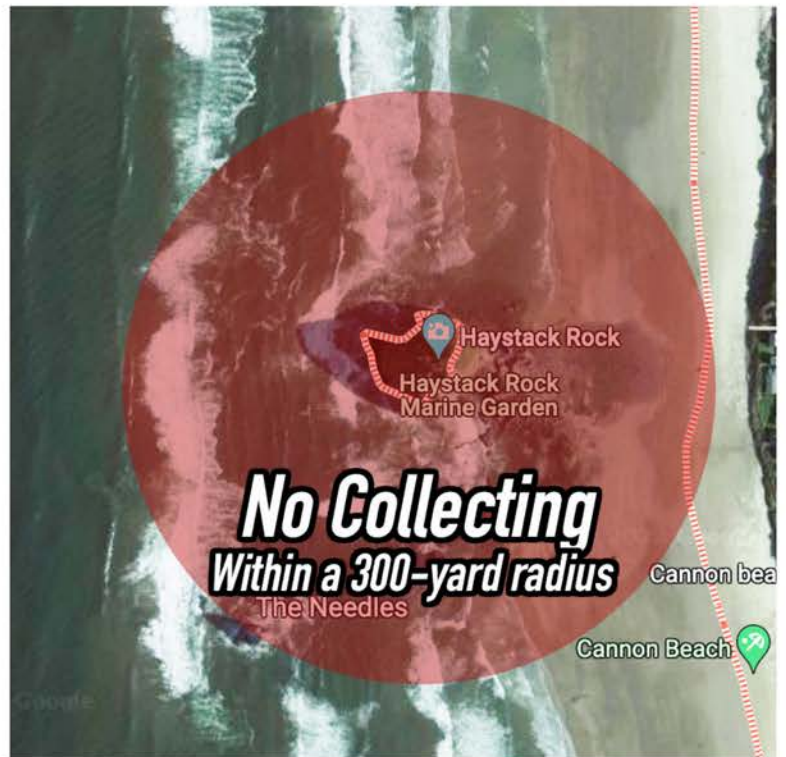

By cutting away large sections of mussels from the rock faces (that you do in the dark so you know what you are doing is wrong) you are removing living, beneficial filter feeding mollusks that help purify the local waters and you are reducing the local breeding population of these creatures.

You are also taking home some "by-catch" that includes juvenile sea stars that are just making a bit of a comeback and the young mussels from the colony you are helping to destroy.

Please consider changing your trajectory and become part of the effort to make our local ecosystems stronger and not set the effort back by stealing "free" mussels.

Mussels, Sea Stars, Anemone and more at Haystack Rock

Collecting is prohibited within a 300-yard radius from the base of Haystack Rock

Police Department Coloring Contest

Over 30 kids, aged six to 10, participated in the Cannon Beach Police Department's coloring contest.

Winners were chosen from each grade level, K-5, as well as overall, and presented with gift certificates to Gepetto's Toy Shoppe.
